An early lesson from the Japanese earthquake: Even islands are not islands

If any country might be considered ready to respond to a major disaster, it would be Japan. Yet the devastating March 11 earthquake has shown that this island state cannot expect to be alone in the wake of a massive calamity. More details.

The IFRC examines Disaster Risk Reduction legislation in Nepal

A new study has been released by the IFRC which examines the different laws and regulations in Nepal in relation to Disaster Risk Reduction, and highlights the main legal gaps and good DRR practices. Click here to read an Analysis of Disaster Risk Reduction Legislation in Nepal.

IDRL study examines Uganda’s legal system governing disaster situations

A new report is now available online which reviews Uganda’s legal system in relation to disaster and emergency situations, and assesses its capacity to monitor and facilitate international disaster assistance. Click here to read about International Disaster Response Law in Uganda.

ALSO IN THIS EDITION

> Latin America develops Regional Legal Compendium
> First annual Disaster Law Short Course held in January
> Development of regional disaster treaties highlights importance of disaster preparedness
> IFRC and ECOWAS join forces
> The Cook Islands work towards legal preparedness for disasters
> China Red Cross learns about IDRL
> Colombia shares its disaster response experiences
> Farewells and new faces
> Our donors
> Email idrl@ifrc.org to subscribe to the weekly IDRL news service