The situation

From October 2018 to January 2020, "caravans" have become a new modality of migration, on the basis of the hypothesis that mobilization attracts people due to the that offers security to migrants and visibility on the route where many Central American migrants have disappeared or been kidnapped, and a way to evade the high price of hiring a smuggler to aid passage to the United States border. The massive population movements continued this first month of the year, registering a massive movement of an estimate between 7,000 and 9,000 migrants that have crossed into the country since 15 January, including many families and children.

The migrant caravan is heading towards the US to escape an economy battered by the pandemic and hurricanes. They are bound towards Mexico, where the government has already deployed security forces and riot police.

Moreover, migrants have been disproportionately affected by the impact of COVID-19. Many of them have been unable to comply with the preventative measures necessary to keep them healthy and safe during the COVID-19 outbreak, due to limited access to essential services – such as health, water, sanitation and hygiene – as well as poor and unsafe living and working conditions.

COVID-19, together with social exclusion, discrimination, violence, and climate-related disasters happening at the same time, with a magnitude rarely seen before in Central America, poses new humanitarian challenges. Eta and Iota have destroyed livelihoods across a region that was already facing an economic crisis and where the income of thousands of families had already been severely depleted due to the pandemic. People are at risk of resorting to coping strategies such as selling their animals and properties, eating less food, and abandoning their hometowns to look for new ways of generating income².

Regional Impact

- The governments of the United States and Mexico have stopped requests for asylum and refuge since March 2020 due to COVID-19, which has increased the numbers of migrant deportation from the NTCA. Following the recent Migrant Protection Protocols (MPPs), states cannot refuse to receive returned migrants, which has caused difficulties in reception countries due to the lack of epidemiological protocols to attend migrant returnees.

- The migration authorities of Mexico, Honduras and Guatemala have created a tripartite agreement to stop these population movements and provide for their safe return with the support of United Nations organizations.

- The migrants entered by pushing past around 2,000 border security forces. Many were unable to show the negative coronavirus test required to enter.

- Guatemalan immigration authorities said the caravan was heading towards Tecun Uman in southern Mexico.

- The Mexican government said it would not be allowing the entry of the migrants, and deployed 500 immigration officers to the border states of Chiapas and Tabasco.

- The humanitarian gap regarding to protection, inclusion and rights has increased for the migrant population returning to NTCA. The countries keep the traditional push factors as poverty, violence, lack of livelihood, malnutrition, natural disasters and climate change, now are exacerbating due to COVID-19, including the discrimination of the communities of origin towards people coming from outside, while increases the needs of returnees. Unaccompanied migrant children are the focus of attention regard to their vulnerabilities and urgent needs, for example psychosocial support to understand the situation of separation and the pandemic is essential.

- The reception countries are evidencing basic needs in their biosecurity processes and epidemiological protocols for the returning population, health care equipment is necessary, as well as the conditions of the isolation centers, the protection of returnees is a topic that is being left aside.

National Societies Response

Honduras

Context

- The caravan that began on 13 January 2021 and concluded its call on the morning of 15 January 2021 is composed of people, who mentioned that as a result of hurricanes Eta-Iota, lost their material goods, sources of employment and their cultivated land. Therefore, they were forced to close their businesses and decided to leave.

- The call was attended by approximately 6 thousand adults, unaccompanied minors, family groups and single adults. Identifying in turn vulnerable groups such as: elderly, disabled, LGBTIQ and illiterate people. Other groups have been incorporated along the route to reach a total of approximately 9,000 people.
